

2024 IFAIR Summer Research Awards

Call for Applications

IFAIR will award:

2 Faculty Summer Research Awards of $1,000
2 Graduate Student Summer Research Awards of $1,000

The Institute for American Indian Research (IFAIR) at the University of New Mexico (UNM) announces Faculty and Graduate Student Summer Research Awards.

Eligibility Criteria: All faculty applicants must hold tenure-track or tenured full-time appointments in a UNM department or academic program. Graduate students must be in good standing and have completed twelve credit hours of graduate courses.

Submission Information:

Applicants should submit the following materials in a single file (.doc/x or .PDF, please) in the following order:

1. A cover page with current contact information (department affiliation, degree status, campus mail address, e-mail address, and telephone number)
2. A two-page proposal clearly explaining in non-specialist language: the focus of the research project; its theoretical groundings in Native/Indigenous research; its connection to IFAIR's mission; and how the funds will be used to advance your work (single-spaced, 12-point type). Additionally, your proposal should indicate how your research is supportive of and supported by Indigenous Nations, communities, or peoples.
3. A detailed budget outlining research and travel expenses. Please indicate other funding sources pursued (pending or awarded).
4. A brief two-page CV
5. A letter from your advisor indicating your readiness to conduct research for your project (For Graduate students only)

Deadline for applications: Friday, April 19th, 2024, 11:59 pm

Please submit the materials electronically as a single PDF or .doc/x Word file in the order listed above to Dr. Sarah Hernandez at hernands@unm.edu. Incomplete submissions will automatically be disqualified. For more information please visit the IFAIR webpage at <https://ifair.unm.edu/>.

